

The Royal Liberty School

"Where Boys are Ambitious, Where Boys Succeed"

Replacement Certificates

JCQ regulations require centres to keep examination certificates for 12 months from the date of issue. After this time, certificates may be destroyed by the centre. Royal Liberty School keeps certificates for a minimum of 5 years from the date of issue. After this time, any unclaimed certificates will be sent for secure destruction.

If you later require your certificates, and the centre no longer holds them, you will need to contact each exam board and follow their replacement certificate procedure. Full details can be found on their websites. This is a time consuming and expensive process which you will have to instigate and pay for yourself.

If you took your exams before the current exam boards came into existence, you will need to contact each board to see who has your results.

The information and prices given below are for guidance only. Please refer to the individual board's website for up-to-date information and fees.
